The 196 IRISH ECHOES

FORWORD

We, the citizens of America are the nation. If America consisted merely of mountains and valleys, unyielding soil and fertile, or cities and forests there would be no ideals to defend, no principles to uphold.

We, the students and faculty, are Notre Dame. Though they are essential, not books, equipment, nor even the building make Notre Dame. It is the idealism, the enthusiasm, and the courageous spirit lighting the faces and warming the hearts in Notre Dame that give it life. It is this life, this idealistic spirit that we endeavored to capture for you within these pages. And if, in the years to come, you thumb through this inanimate object, and the intangible thing called idealism again becomes alive in your intellect, then this instrument has served its purpose.

DEDICATION

In 1860 four pioneer Sisters of Saint Dominic lighted a torch of zeal and learning that burned brilliantly in the heart of each in the Community of Saint Cecelia. These four heroic sisters have influenced, encouraged, and led by example until now about one-hundred and fifty sisters shine in the glow of their torch-lit paths.

Dedicated to the purpose of spreading the Faith, the Community of Saint Cecelia in Nashville founded Notre Dame in 1876 as an academy for girls. Early in the twentieth century the present building was built and the curriculum became co-educational. Using the alumnae, many of whom are parents of present day students, as an illustration of the influencing factor of religious education, the same conception of the importance of the intangibles must have been instilled in the students from the very beginning by these deeply spiritual sisters.

It is these cheerful sisters who are responsible for the overwhelming spirit among the student body. To them we owe the credit for instilling the principles and ideals that have helped us reach a well adjusted maturity. It is to them, then, that, in gratitude, we dedicate this 1961 IRISH ECHOES, for they are the essence of the life at Notre Dame that is depicted on these pages.

We have all heard of the controversial cliche, "Behind every great man there's a great woman", but there is no disputing the fact that behind every Notre Dame High School student, there's a Sister of Saint Dominic.

OFFICE OF THE BISHOP

My dear Graduates.

"Though I prefer learning joined with virtue to all the treasures of kings; yet renown for learning, when it is not united with a good life, is nothing else than splendid and notorious infamy."

So wrote that great statesman and martyr St. Thomas More to the instructors of his three daughters; and certainly he would not say otherwise if he were speaking of sons.

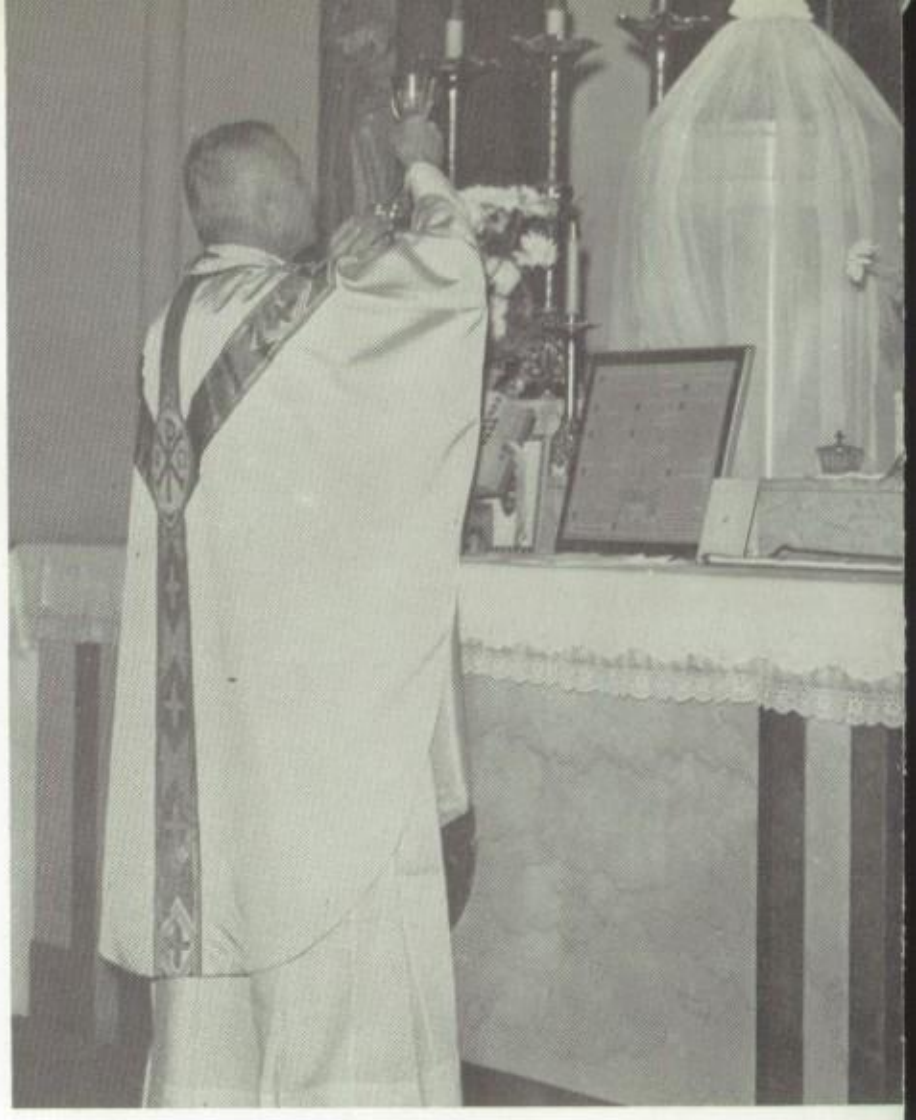
The Saint here stresses the essential element of a sound education, namely, that it must prove itself by meeting the test of being conducive to a good, virtuous life.

To so form your lives has been the one great objective of your instructors at Notre Dame High School. You have been taught the essentials for such a life by word and example; Now it is up to you to prove the merits of that teaching. Your success in meeting that challenge is the greatest honor you can pay to your Alma Mater; it is the best "thankyou" that you can tender to your instructors and Pastors and parents.

We sincerely congratulate you on your achievement; we unite our prayers with theirs for your success; we commend you to Jesus & Mary-

+ Bishop Adrian

LOOKING BACK



At Notre Dame the curriculum centers around and is penetrated by spiritual development. As her students, our religious life is punctuated by daily Mass, frequent opportunities to receive various sacraments, and regularly scheduled devotions. Four years of excellently planned courses in religion are required, and several clubs at school offer further extension in our knowledge of our Faith and our zeal on its behalf. After even a relatively short time exposed to the generally charitable atmosphere and the constantly striving upward attitude of the faculty and students alike, each of us could not help but be influenced greatly in our growth as a person in God.

As in nearly every school that boasts of a football team, Notre Dame eagerly awaits that shrill whistle and resounding thud of the first kickoff beginning each thrilling football season. Enthusiasm mounts high throughout the school, and Coach is always the center of attention with those runners of touchdowns, throwers of blocks, and catchers of passes sharing the limelight with him. Young and old gather together under clear skies or cloudy, in warm or bitter cold night air to watch our boys blaze another challenging trail to victory. Surely, if at no other time, during football season is the cliche appropo, "All for Notre Dame and Notre Dame for all!"

Although training received at Notre Dame is unique, parents play an undeniably essential part in the receptive attitude of the students to this training. Parents are responsible for the general forming of the character of their children, for through parental guidance and love youngsters learn what to expect from life and people. They learn by example the attitude to assume toward authority, and how to accept responsibility.

An opportunity for parents to become familiar with the curriculum in which their children participate at Notre Dame is offered by the annual Parents' Night held late in the fall. Then do parents have the occasion to meet and converse with the faculty as they follow the schedule and attend the classes of their teen-agers. During an informal gathering in the cafeteria after seven shortened periods have been completed, parents are found laughing at their "faux pas" and marveling at the apparent genius of their children who function intelligently amid this maze of confusion.

Looking back . . . looking back on a year of perfection. Perfect because it was a further unravelling of God's perfect plan. Each day, each hour with its joys, anticipations, and disappointments was completed with the loving guidance of the All-Wise. Each of us, through these hours and days, have achieved another step in our ultimate destiny.

Looking back on this year, we see an all-important year, for without this one, our next year and the years following would hang eternally in the indefinite future.

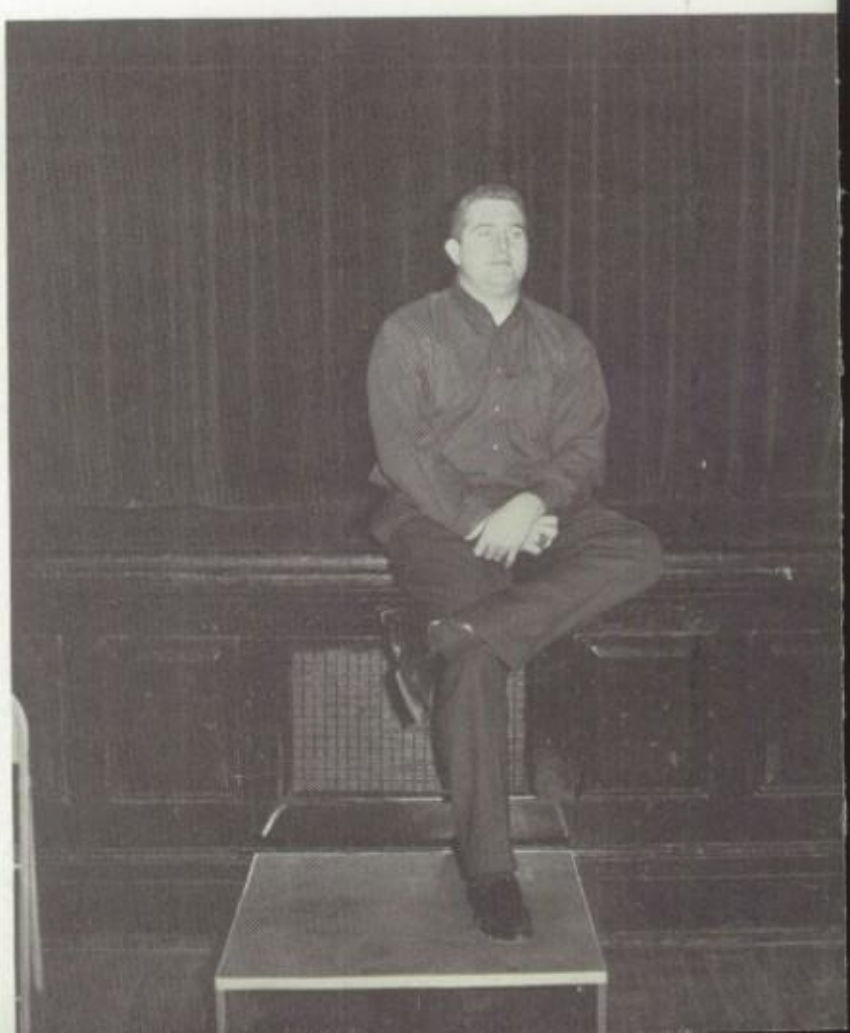
FACULTY

Devoted to the task of instructing, guiding, and leading the students, the faculty of Notre Dame consists of competent and dedicated men and women.

Numbering sixteen, the faculty is made up of four diocesan priests, supplemented by seven Dominican Sisters of the Community of Saint Cecilia in Nashville, and four lay men.

These sacrificing teachers fulfill not only their responsibilities in the class room, but also the time- and work-consuming task of enthusiastically moderating an extra-curricular activity.

Our faculty is, indeed, not merely a body of professors and unapproachable school masters. It is a group of teachers, . . . understanding, warm, and zealous for the cause of their idealism.



That sly little smile, piercing blue eyes, a stern forceful look, all these describe Father Driscoll. How well we all can remember the proud manner in which he announced the Merit Scholarship semi-finalists; or his elated expression when we won the T.V.C. championship; or his boyish grin when Francis, his little cocker spaniel, followed him up and down the school halls.

This, however, is only the outward appearance. To us, he is much more. Father Driscoll is the incentive behind each student and the very nucleus of the school. He spurs us on to great goals, assuring us every second that we can be the best in everything from scholarship to sports, despite our small size. His encouragement and dreams cause us to strive for these honors, not only for the glory but also that he might proudly call us "his school."

We readily approach him with our problems, knowing well that he will give us comforting advice. Yet, on the other hand, we dread being called into his office for some wrong of which we may be guilty, for as surely as we can expect his sympathy, we can also expect an impartial judgment and an equally fair punishment.

Father Driscoll, the cause, the means, and the end of Notre Dame.

STUDENTS

Enthusiastic, carefree, and diligent—this describes the typical Notre Dame student. Every new day is met with a genuine joy for living, and the over-abundant spirit of these teen-agers is not quenched throughout the day. Peals of laughter can always be heard issuing from wherever students are gathered.

Seldom do you see a Notre Dame girl walking anywhere in school; she's always running—to meet deadlines—to find people—to just happen to be at the water fountain at just the same time that that certain boy comes out of room 201.

Boys, on the other hand, saunter casually down the halls—one hand in a pocket, the other holding a book or two. Never a care in the world, boys accept responsibility calmly without worrying or griping.

As individuals, as well as a group, the students possess a unique quality of spirit and a proper sense of values.

BOOKS

GINN AND COMPANY
PUBLISHERS

Senior officers: Francis Ainsworth, president; Brian Corden, vice-president; Ruth Machacek, secretary; Gene Hubbuch, treasurer.

As we, the seniors of Notre Dame, prepare for our impending graduation, we cannot help but reminisce over these past four years. How familiar are these halls, classrooms, and faces now, and yet how strange and almost ominous they seemed when we entered those doors for the first time as freshmen.

Do you remember our "Sophomore Only Club"? Yes, of course, what fun we had at those parties!

The junior class play! We were so afraid the audience wouldn't laugh when it was supposed to, but thank goodness, our fears were unwarranted.

The games, open-houses, concerts, dances, . . . all those big moments . . . we'll never forget them.

This year, especially, is filled with memories.

Football season—the first homecoming celebration in the history of Notre Dame!—trophies galore, all-city and all-state honors, scholarships—and best of all, . . . the coveted T.V.C. Championship!

Basketball season—thrilling games, more challenges met, more trophies won!

After three years of doing the little man's work, we finally reach the top—editor of the Marian, editor of the IRISH ECHOES, president of the Student Council, C.S.M.C.—only to realize that we didn't really know what work was, until we reached the position of supposedly supervising!

Another play to produce, this one even more successful than the first, colleges to choose between, themes to write—all these are part of our senior year.

But as we look over this year, the year before, as well as the sophomore and freshman years, we remember most of all the guiding hand of the faculty. We sincerely hope that our future lives render us worthy of the concern they had for us during our high school years.

Good looks, . . . talent, . . . brains, . . . you name it, we've got it! Who? Why, the juniors, of course! But let it not be said that we have no spirit! We're forever looking for an outlet for our boundless energy, as any observant person will notice.

Scholastically speaking, the juniors have improved steadily over the years and anticipate reaching higher goals during their up-coming final year. There has been an eager interest in the Marian, IRISH ECHOES, and the C.S.M.C. displayed by the juniors this year.

Several junior football lettermen were responsible in part for the glorious season this year, but there are even more fearless players who hope for a year just as successful when they are the leaders on the team. Many juniors are dedicated to the hoop. These are our own varsity basketball players.

During this, our next-to-the-last year in high school, many of us juniors have come to realize that life will make larger and more important demands that must be faced by us. We firmly believe that the training we have received at Notre Dame will help us through with flying colors.

Introducing the "Wise-Fools" of 1960-61! We are easily recognized because of our unsuspecting anticipation of the years to come when we will be upper-classmen, combined with a knowing, sympathetic attitude when we observe the antics of the green frosh.

As freshmen, we, the members of the class of '63, participated in a wide variety of activities, and now, as sophomores, we are using our better-developed quality as well as our quantity to bring fame to Notre Dame.

Scholastically we rank among the highest, with a good percentage of the class probationary members of the National Honor Society. The Math and Science Clubs are fields of interest of many sophomores, while others are more than passive members of the language clubs.

Athletically, sophomores hold great potential prowess within our not yet mature frames. Football, as well as both boys' and girls' basketball, interests our athletes as they strive for perfection in sportsmanship.

An unselfish enthusiasm for hard work, not only for the C.S.M.C., but also for the Sodality and the Cecilians has been displayed by sophomores, as we relentlessly contribute our utmost to our school in every phase of its curriculum.

Freshmen officers: Mike Davis, secretary; Carol Monroe, president; Chris Brown, vice-president; Martha Schmidt, treasurer.

No longer strangers, we, the freshmen have quickly adapted ourselves to the atmosphere and activities of NDHS. We are extremely active in the scholastic and athletic programs, as well as the social activities of the school.

Most of us are endeavoring to maintain a high average which will render us eligible for the National Honor Society as upper-classmen. Many freshmen are working hard as Science and/or Math Club members, and even more of us are looking forward to joining the language clubs.

On the sports scene, the freshmen boys had successful seasons in both football and basketball, and we anticipate even greater baseball glory for them. The freshmen cheerleaders contributed to the teams' morale with their abundant spirit.

Freshmen are responsible for the success of the stamp drive for the C.S.M.C., and also we cheerfully collected food for the Sodality to give needy Chattanooga families at Christmas. The Cecilians are not without faithful freshmen with singing ability.

As we look back on this year of achievement and fun, we can't help but cast an eager eye toward our future years here at Notre Dame.

Shenanigans

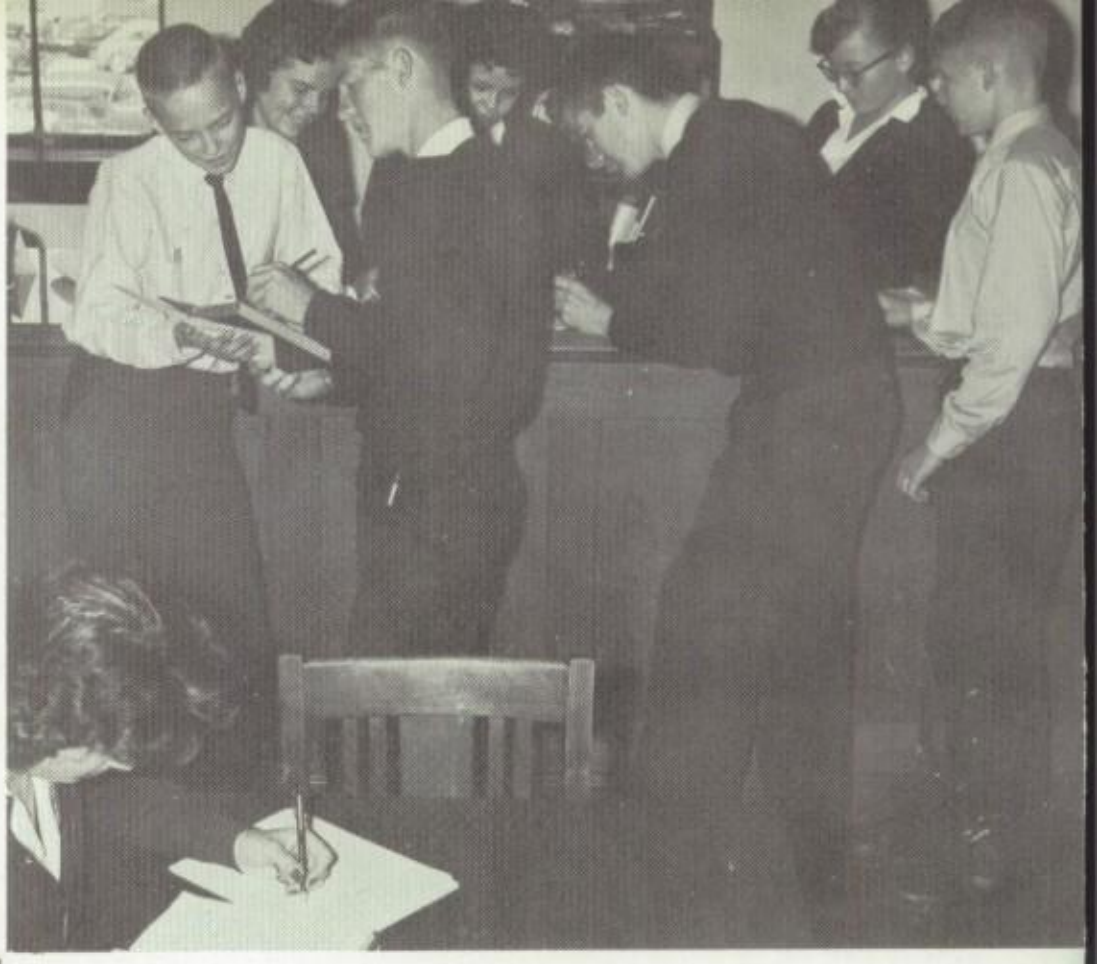
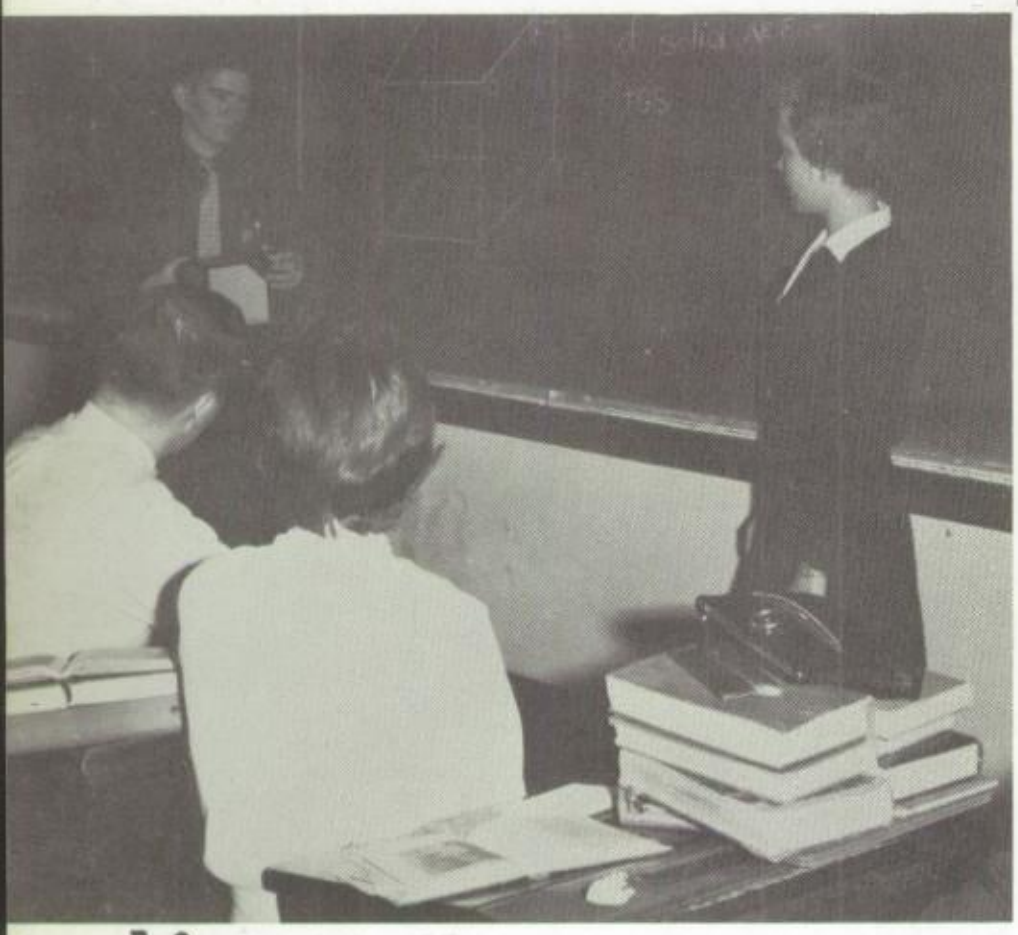
Laughter shared . . . problems discussed . . . disappointments mutually sympathized . . . secrets whispered in confidence; this is the unique relationship between the students and the faculty members at Notre Dame. Not merely regarded as faces across the desk, these people possess a genuine and warm interest in each other as real persons with individual personalities. Though many of the faculty members are considered friends by the students, they never lose sight of the respect due the faculty, both as religious and as authority.

At Notre Dame is the studenty-faculty relationship truly one which creates an environment most conducive to full development of character and mental capacities.

ACADEMICS





At Notre Dame the academic life of her students is most important. Knowledge is imparted to the students daily by the highly trained sisters, priests, and lay teachers. The curriculum is well-rounded, offering English, mathematics, languages, social studies, sciences, and the all-important religion courses. Academic clubs, such as the Science and Math Clubs, the language clubs, and the Honor Society, broaden the cultural horizons of the students as well as increase their leadership ability.

Quality is the goal of Notre Dame. Her students are instilled with the endeavor to possess integrity, ambition, morals, and ideals of the highest standards.

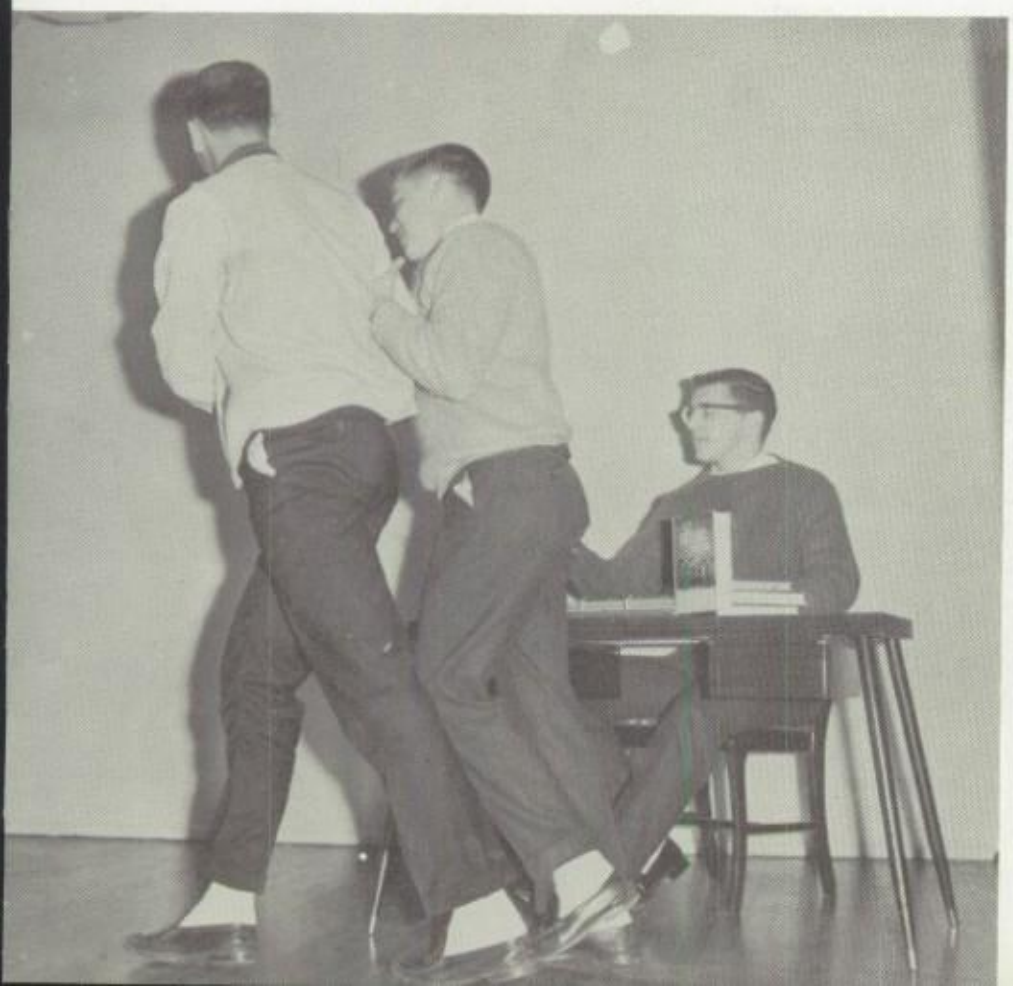
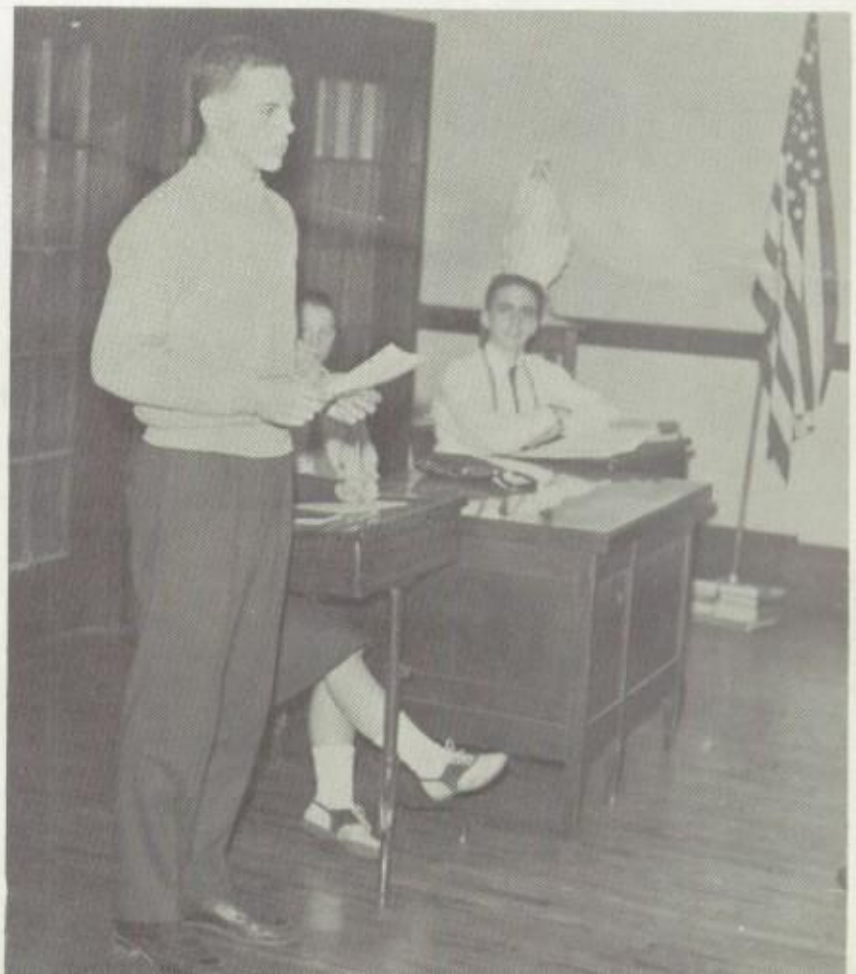
Mike O'Grady outlines the various backgrounds and cultures of people in the different sections of France for the benefit of the French Club.





Remember always the Notre Dame classroom . . . friendly greetings . . . laughter . . . an occasional paper wad, eraser, or piece of chalk flying through the air . . . the bell and the resulting hush . . . then . . . "Come Holy Spirit" . . . tomorrow's homework is . . . "Your attention" echoing through the hall . . . That surprise quiz . . . the question you answered and no one else knew . . . and finally . . . "We fly to thy patronage . . ."

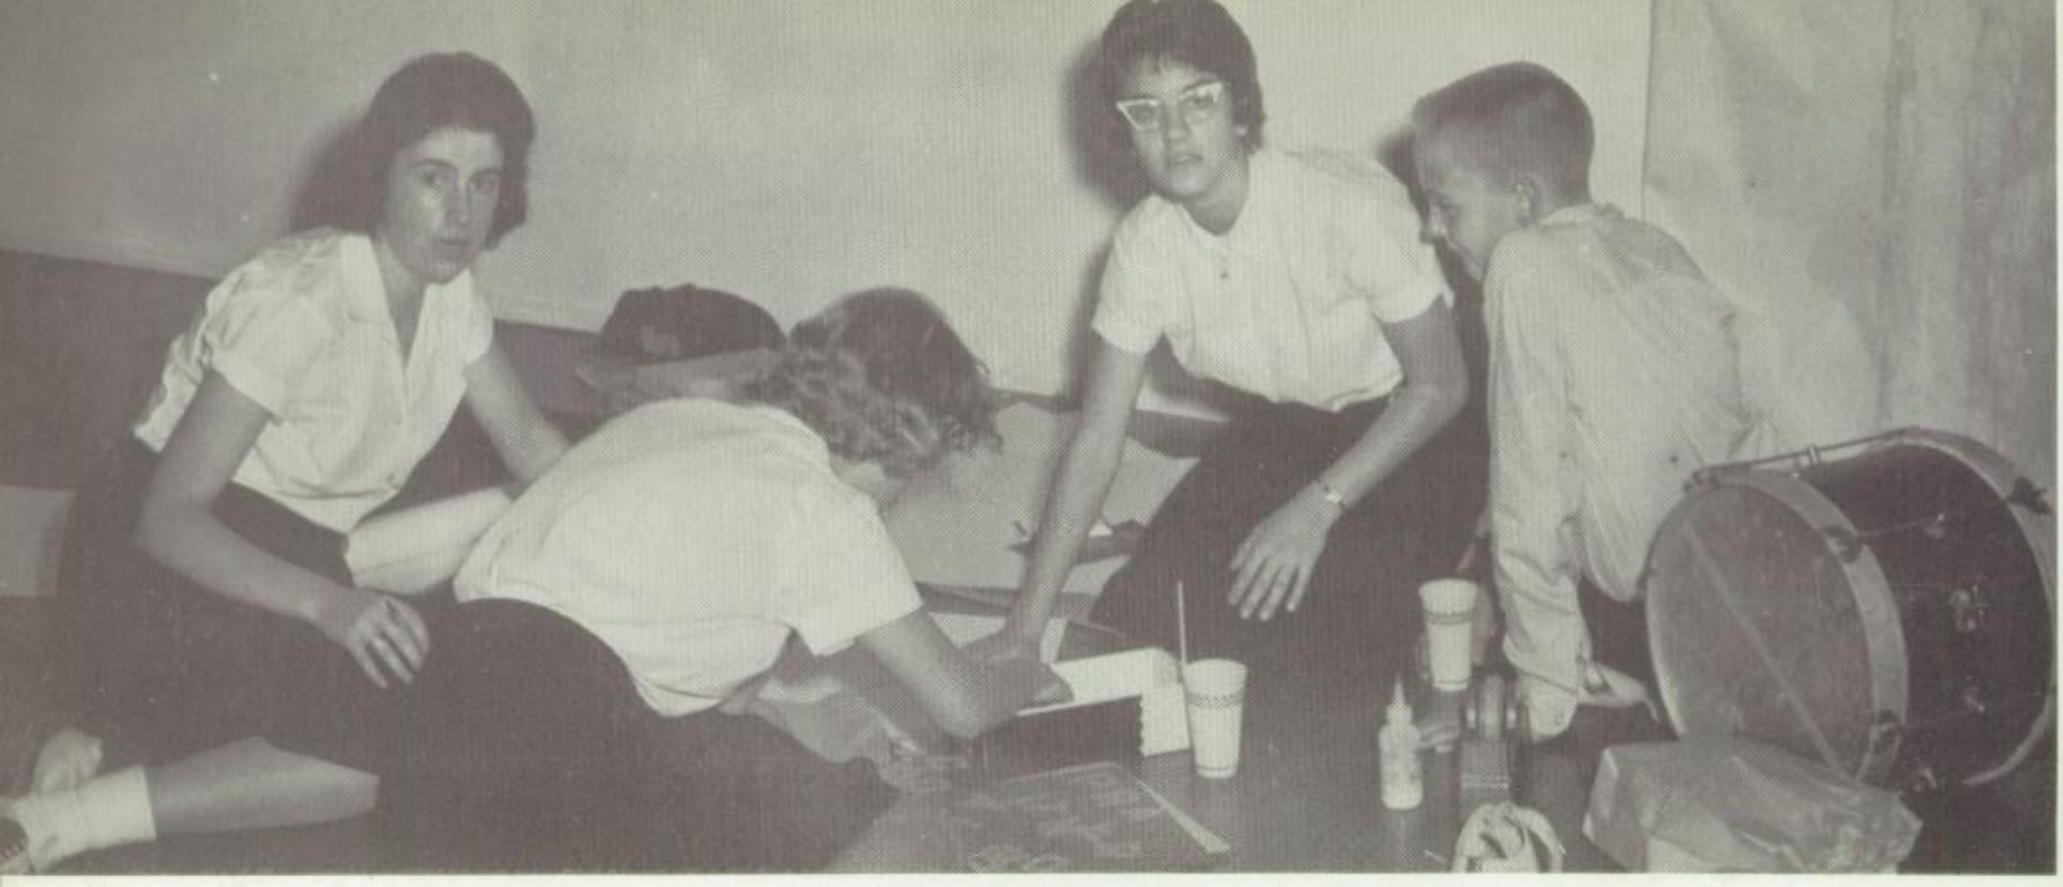
Yes, becoming a student of Notre Dame is one of the highest honors we can ever hope to obtain. It encompasses achievement in the goals of learning, dependability, and deportment. Leadership is the high ideal; religion is the spiritual guidepost; studying is the key to these goals; and attitudes round out this man of character.

ACTIVITIES

It takes quite a variety of personalities to make up a world. This also holds true in a school. God made all of us different in some respect, if he had not we would quickly tire of each other.

At Notre Dame good grades are demanded of us. However, this is not the only requirement with which we are faced. We must learn to get along with people, to sacrifice for others, to work for the good of the school!

We are afforded these opportunities in the various ACTIVITIES offered at Notre Dame. Working hard on the Yearbook and Marian staffs, putting special emphasis on our work in the C.S.M.C. or other spiritual organizations, or merely having a lot of fun at a dance—we are growing. Not only growing in experience and understanding of others, but growing in our spiritual life as well!



Mary Althoff, Mary Watson, Rosie Mirabella and Bo Short—get ready for the C.S.M.C. meeting.

THIS IS PARTICIPATION . . .

MISSION CRUSADE

Officers: Frances Ainsworth, President; Sister Mary James, Sponsor; Louis Pastorik, Treasurer; Patty Giles, Secretary; Mary Ann Stone, Vice-President.

On the first Friday of every month a meeting is held at Notre Dame. The meeting is usually on the humorous side; however, it always conveys a vital point concerning the mission world. Yes, you guessed right, this is a meeting of the C.S.M.C. After the conclusion of each meeting an audible "sigh" may be heard by the officers. This token of relief eminates from the heart of the sponsor, Sister Mary James. After said meeting the tension is released for another three weeks. This procedure is continued for the entire year, in addition to arranging for study groups, projects, and any number of other things.

The C.S.M.C. has progressed from a non-descript organization of inactive members to an active, co-operative group. The thanks go to Sister Mary James, the officers, and the entire student body.

ALTAR BOYS

These boys realize the honor that goes with being an altar boy—the opportunity of serving God in a manner given to only a very few people.

There is, however, sacrifice entailed with the honor. It isn't exactly pleasant to get up about five-thirty to serve six-thirty Mass, unless you do it for the honor and glory of God.

SODALITY

Sister Ambrose, Moderator, shows officers the new Sodality flag—Ruth Machacek, vice-president; Toni Tocco, secretary; Mary Weidner, treasurer; Kathy Park, president; Mary Louise Genshimer, corresponding secretary.

"Mary—Our tainted nature's Solitary boast"

To the girls at Notre Dame the Sodality is no longer merely an organization, it is a way of life. It is the sanctification of self, then of others.

Under the direction of Sister Ambrose the girls have informed themselves by means of panel discussions, have entertained at informal meetings, and have provided, to some extent, for the material needs of others. They are to be congratulated on the wonderful work they have accomplished.

GLEE CLUB

Officers: Kathy Park, vice-president; Toni Tocco, president; Gail Nevins, treasurer; Ruth Machacek, recording secretary; Melinda L'heureux, librarian; Father Grannis, director; Judy Camposano, assistant librarian.

Since its organization four years ago the Cecilians have worked harder with each succeeding year. They have now achieved the goal they set for themselves four years ago.

Teamwork! It takes teamwork to make a success of any organization. Father Grannis and the girls have had their finest year thus far. The new Varsity Choir, appropriately named the Sweet Sixteen, has gained the admiration of many. These sixteen lovely girls have found their performances in great demand from some of the leading business organizations of the city. They have represented the whole Glee Club in a wonderful manner.

The officers have worked very hard this year and they are to be commended for their tireless efforts. They know as well as the others that it isn't easy to practice after school for over an hour. It isn't easy to give up a Sunday afternoon for more practice. But it is easy to reap the reward.

Congratulations to Father Grannis and the Cecilians on a job well done!

Whether enjoying the dance . . .

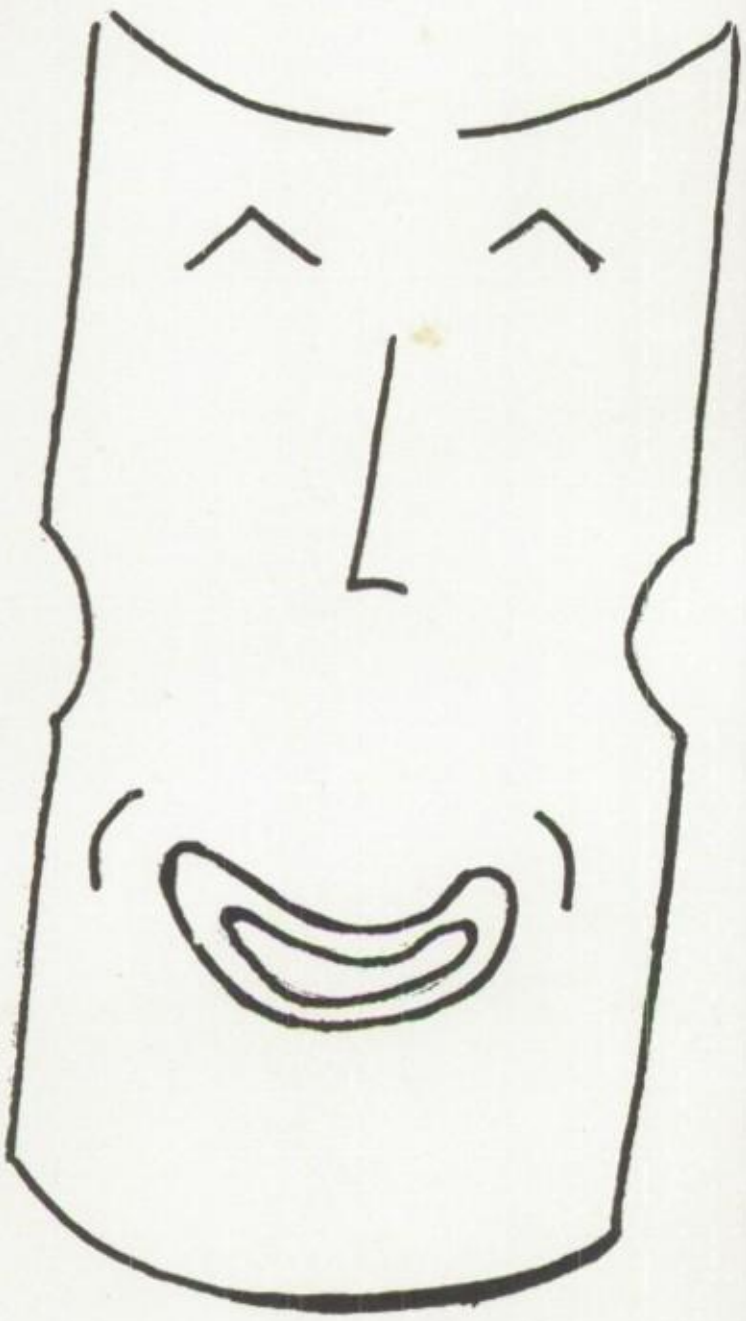
The students at Notre Dame have found that they don't need elaborate decorations at a dance to have fun. They can have fun by merely being with each other.

This attitude makes the bigger and more formal dances even more fun. I'm sure that all the students will remember for a long time to come their four proms, especially their Senior Prom. I'm sure that all the students will remember the dance given by the Senior girls, but along with these extra special dances goes the memory of the parties at school, the class parties, the fun of planning and decorating, the anticipation, the good-night at the door. All of these shall be remembered.

JUNIOR PLAY

The Junior play of 1960 (Jenny Kissed Me) was hailed by all as a fine performance. A country girl, Jenny, played by Sandi Ebright, finds herself thrown into the midst of a city environment. She is invited to visit her aunt, Kathy Hollerbach, who happens to be the housekeeper for Father Moynihan, Phil Hyman. This, of course, entails certain complications, romantic and otherwise. The play evolves humorously around this plot and its climax is unexpected and amusing.



Judy Camposano, Brenda Daugherty, Betty Giles, John Erickson

Judy Camposano, Marquerite Oberon; Jon Allison, Harry Ryan

The Senior class celebrated St. Patrick's Day in grand style this year. Their play Laughing Irish Eyes was as clever as it was humorous. One interesting and mystifying situation after another took place throughout the acts. The cast did a fine job and so did their director Miss Angela Albea. Sister Cecilia also worked hard on every part of the play. It was a fine play, one the seniors could be proud of.

MONDAY

WILLIE MAHN - Sports Editor

The church bells ring the Angelus, belts are pulled to the empty notch, and work-be-grimed hands are pushed through hair already standing on end, as the Marian Staff wearily settles back to another two or three hours of hard, finger-aching toil. Little do people realize how much time, effort, and energy go into just one issue of the paper.

The Marian first comes into being in the form of assignments given to the reporters. These assignments are received with strained smiles and rolling eyes, but nevertheless they are received.

The reporters work diligently as they write and rewrite until their articles reach the height of perfection.

Up until this time the page editors could be comparatively composed, but as the assignments are turned in the wheels really start rolling.

Copy reading, changing, rewriting, copy reading again, and, at last the stories are in the hands of the editor. That long-suffering individual, after many false starts, finally manages to place the entire stack of "copy" in the hands of the printer.

FRIDAY

This copy returns from the printer in the form of galleys, long scrap sheets of paper. The galleys are divided among the editors and readied for pasting up. This consists in arranging and pasting the stories and articles on "dummies" or back sheets of the school paper. "Pasting up" consumes the largest amount of time and effort on the part of the staff. It is here, with scissors and glue that the paper starts taking shape. It is at this time when stories are cut out or shortened, and that dreaded work space is filled with precious black print.

But at last everything falls into place and the ever-patient editor again trudges to the printer's office, this time with her hands full of galleys and dummies.

Once again the staff meets. This time for proof-reading. Every inch of the "page proofs" are poured over by eyes fast becoming weary from picking out errors in the endless rows of type.

But, at last the editor takes her last trip, then comes the realization that the job is done.

1961 IRIS ECHOES STAFF

Mary Ann Stone, Sister Cecilia, Alice Bunn

How does it feel to be able to go home after school? You may think this is an odd question, however, it could well be asked by either of the IRISH ECHOES editors. I'm sure everyone in school is familiar with the mournful wail of an editor, "But Dick, I told you we had to have those pictures by Monday. Equally familiar are their books, disarranged with yearbook material piled underneath textbooks. These are our editors?

Working side by side diligently, and above all, patiently, is their sponsor, Sister Cecilia. She is the person to whom and through whom all material must pass. She checks and rechecks, and eventually mails the finished pages to the publisher. Without her patient supervision . . .

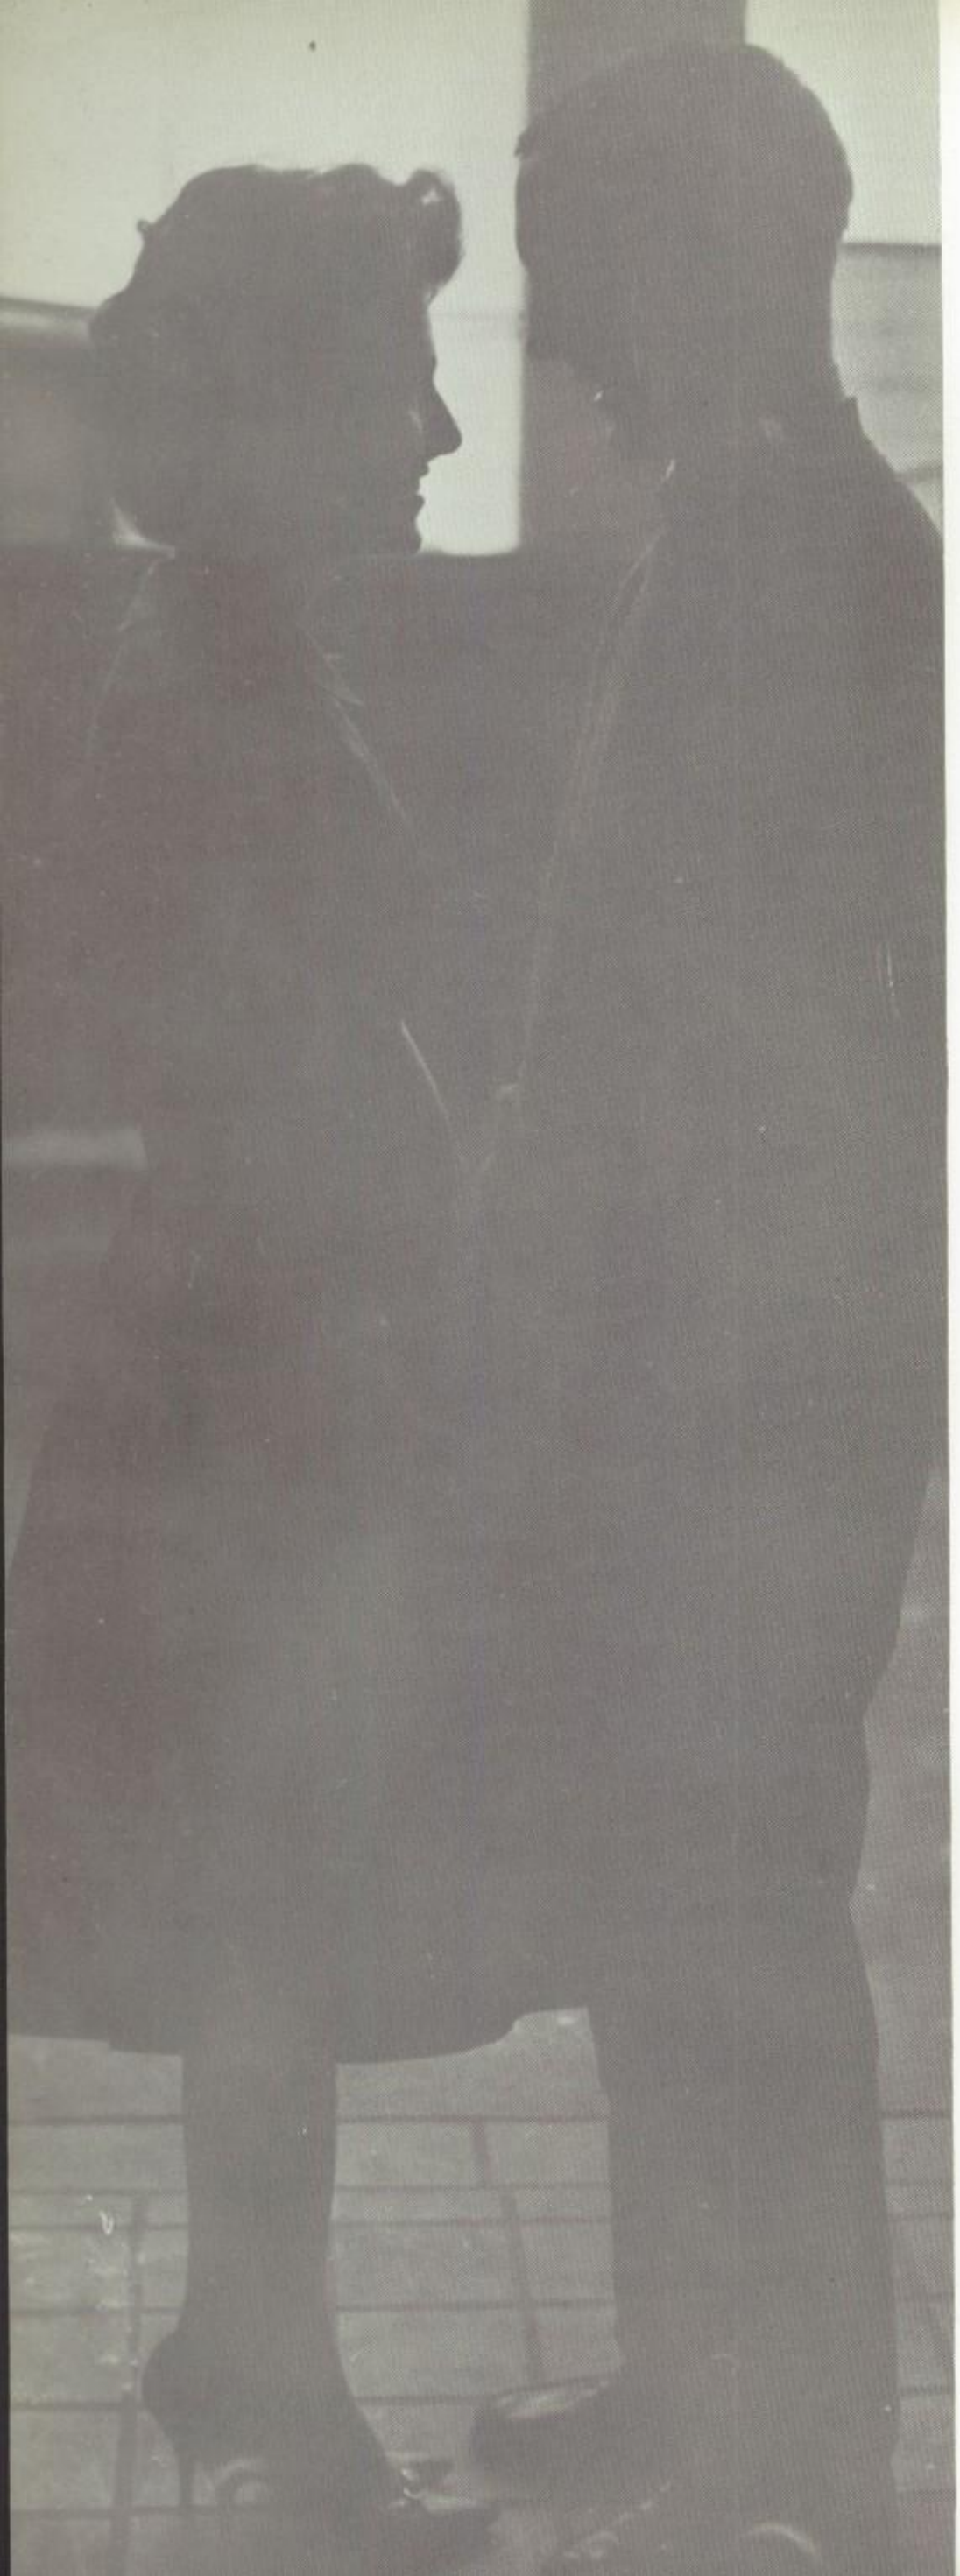
Next in line on the list is our photography department. These diligent shutter-bugs and their assistant had a big job on their hands. This assistant sets up all pictures and puts up with the editors. I hasten to add that many after school hours have been given up by this crew also.

These are the main figures in the creation of the IRISH ECHOES. Behind the scenes are many, many other helping hands. Without these we would be unable to publish the yearbook. We wish to express our appreciation to this workworn, and often unheralded group.

This is our staff, dedicated to recreating a part of the school on paper. We hope we have succeeded in our endeavors.

A late breakfast for some early risers.

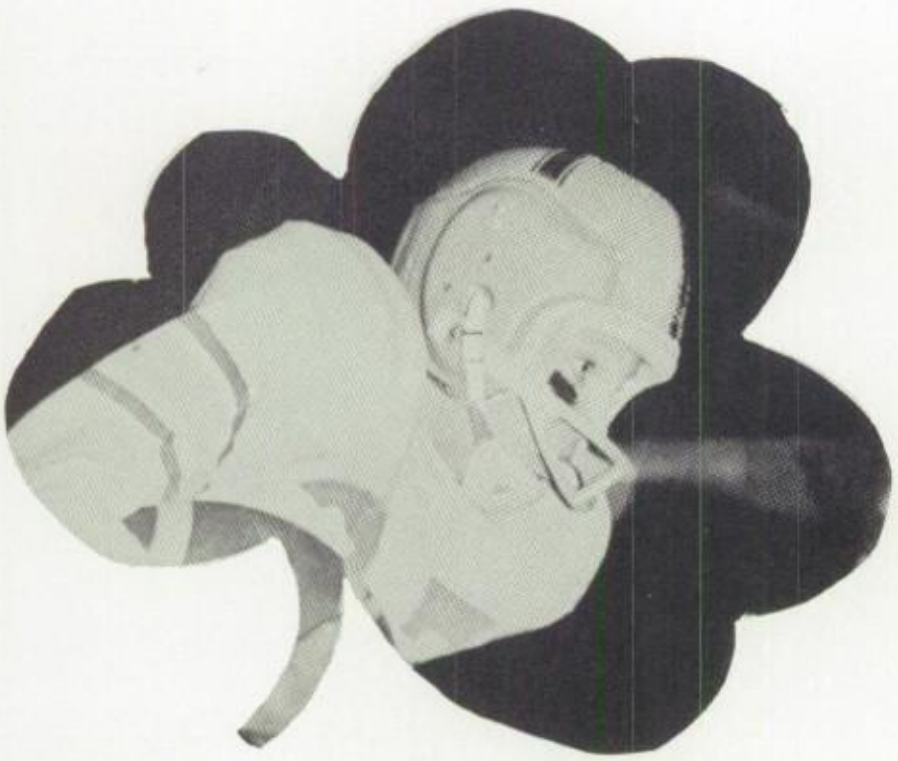
Ellen Kelly, Alice Bunn, Mary Ann Stone, Sister Cecilia, Mary Ann Tytula, Annie Hetzler

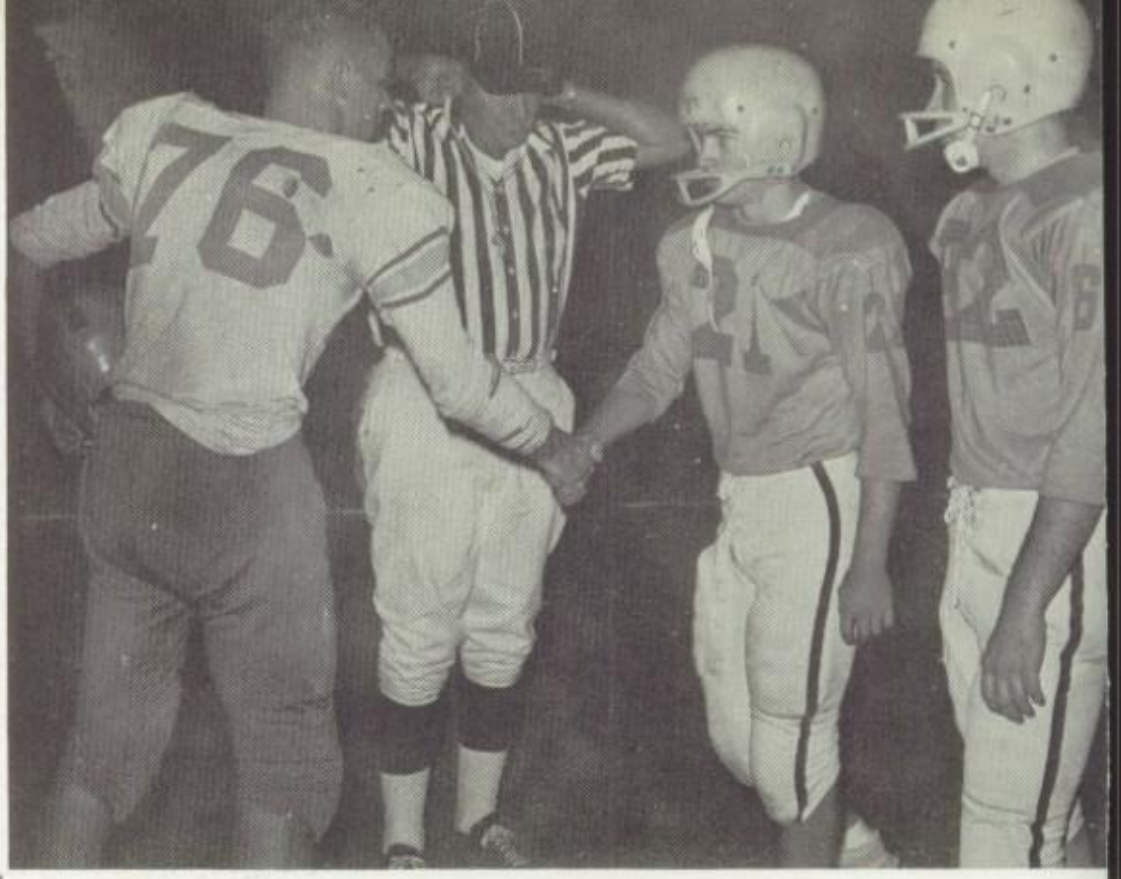


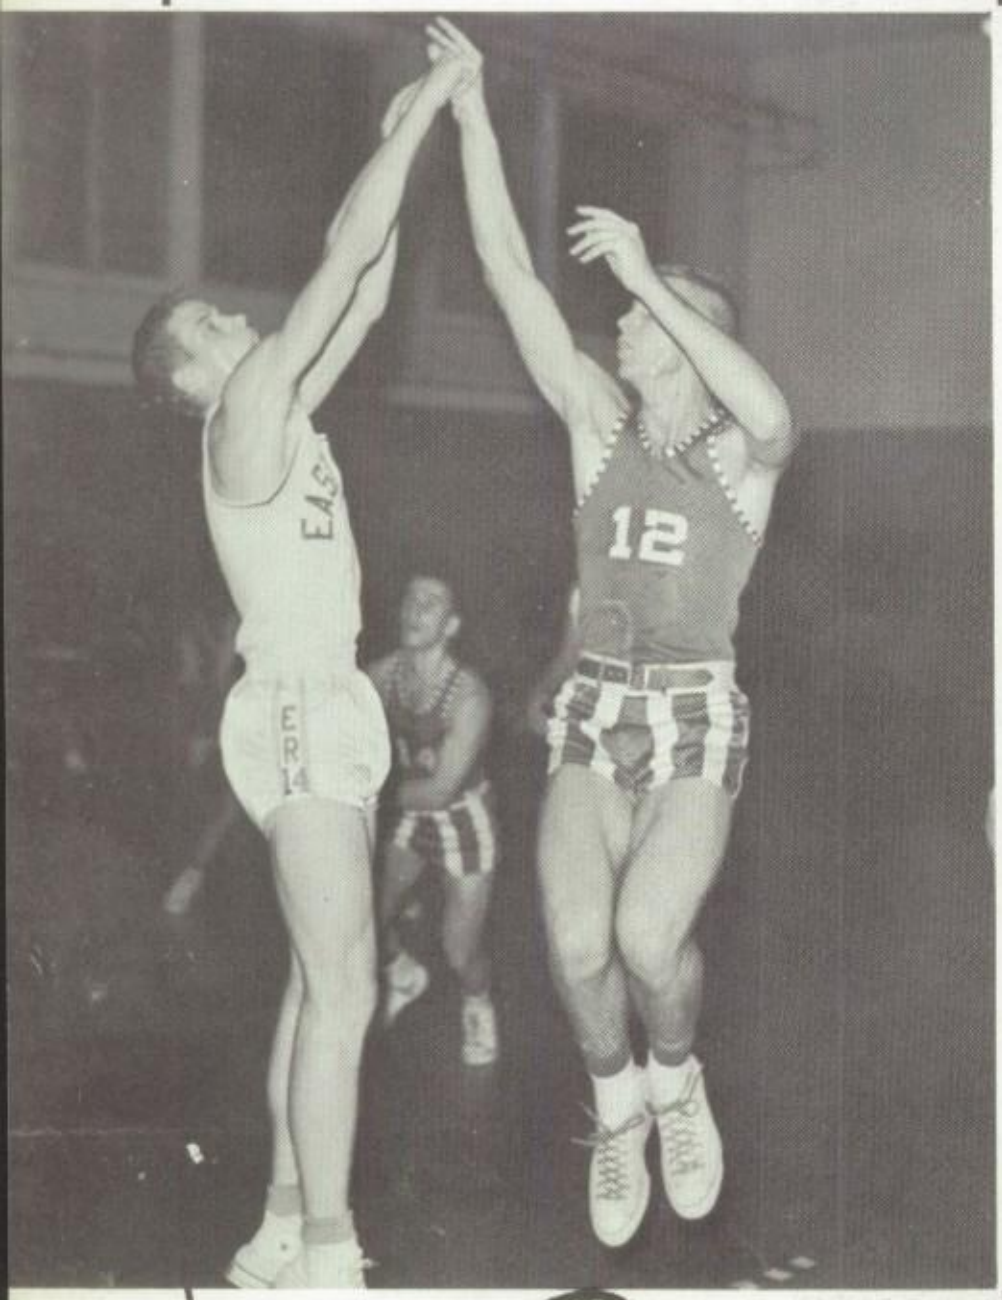
The activities at Notre Dame offer her students something special. Although not elaborate in their compass they offer the student the personal contact which is irreplaceable.

By the social contacts, the friendships that last for a lifetime, the advantages of a small school with a big spirit, may the students of Notre Dame mature in their understanding of others.

ATHLETICS







Notre Dame is proud of her athletic achievements. She is proud of her team honors as well as her individual stars. She only demands that the athletes of the school do their best. They have honored her a hundredfold. May the fine athletes she has produced continue through life ever upholding her fine standards.

WE DEDICATE THESE PAGES TO THE NOTRE DAME ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Officers: Mr. Carl Hubbuch, Treasurer; Mr. Douglas Herbst, President; Mr. A. J. Kelly, vice-president; Mr. Arnold Mayo, Secretary

Behind all great machines there must be a motivating force whose purpose is to keep the machine running smoothly while manufacturing the product for which it was made. One such force which drives a mechanism so complex and so vast as to be labeled the mainstay and spirit of the school is the Notre Dame Athletic Association. This expanding group of loyal men is the underlying reason why the Notre Dame Athletic Department has progressed and grown with each succeeding year. They have fulfilled their purpose as seen in the many achievements and the spirit of Notre Dame.

With the overwhelming defeat of Marion County in the divisional play-off of the Tennessee Valley Conference, the Notre Dame football machine climaxed the most successful football season in the school's history. The superbly-played game was a fitting tribute to the coaches and players and marked the swan song of a team which had become unceasingly better from game to game as the desire to win was more keenly felt.

Although any scoring run, dazzling punt return, or deceptive pass pattern which enjoyed success was the result of team effort, individual brillance shone brightly throughout the year and these players received their just reward.

Up in front, the Irish possessed the line end to end which, with determination being the major factor, was consistently opening up holes on offense while defensively holding their opponents to a meager average of 5.4 points per game. They were led by captain and all-city tackle Mike O'Grady on offense and all-southern middle guard Jim Hennen on defense. But all who played were a due credit to the green and white.

The backfield was led by all-TVC fullback Gary Hill, quarterback Gary Herbst, and halfbacks Skipper Nardo and Gene Hubbuch, Gene being the 2nd leading scorer in the city, but here again these 4 were ably supported by a 2nd and 3rd unit, which performed the job almost equally as well.

The common goal of every athlete is the earning of a Varsity Letter. Although only a material symbol, it could very easily be made of gold for the honor it represents.

SPIRIT OF '60

GO!! IRISH!! This is a familiar sound to all of us. It is heard at football and basketball games alike. Who encourages these yells for victory? Its the energetic girls in green skirts and white sweaters otherwise known as the cheerleaders. They are full of vim and vigor from the top of their beanies to the tip of their saddle oxfords. At pep rallies they display their talent for raising the roof. They lead in the encouragement for that extra "push" needed for the team to win that special championship. These girls of action show their best in everything they do. Notre Dame extends many thanks to these girls for a job well done.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

The freshman football team had a busy season this year. Traveling first to South Pittsburg where they reaped a 7-0 victory, the next stop on their itinerary was at Dayton where they had their first taste of defeat, they were defeated 12-40. The "Little Irish" traveled to T.M.I., Baylor, and Arnold Jr. High also ending up with a good season. Coach Rewis summed up the season in these words, "We did real well and all the boys are looking forward to spring practice." The staff of the Irish Echoes wishes them luck.

Kathy Park; Ruth Machecek; Betty Giles, Queen; Ellen Kelly and Anna M. Hetzler.

The first HOMECOMING at Notre Dame in ten years, an event to be remembered. The gala evening was perfect in every respect. The football game we won; the Sewanee Drill Team; our beautiful queen and her court; the dance after the game; these were all events that will be long remembered by the students of Notre Dame.

BASKETBALL

A flash of green on the varnished floor, swoosh, "That's two," as Coach Clary would say. It seems the Irish have really been lucky this year. Not only in football have they excelled, but in basketball as well. The Greenies have racked up one victory after another. Yes, as Coach Clary would say, "The round ball season was a good one."

"B" TEAM

"B" Team basketball had a fine season this year setting a good example for the freshman team. All this is evidence of the teams we will have in the years to come at Notre Dame. They are eagerly looking forward to next year when they will be a part of the Varsity Team.

The boys have been working hard for this goal all year. Their enthusiasm clearly reveals their hopes next year. We wish them success in their future endeavors.

The 1960-61 season has indeed been a fruitful one in the field of sports. The IRISH have outdone themselves as a team and in personal achievements. They have rolled to victory more than once when the odds were heavily against them. This is the essence of sports at Notre Dame—to do your best, place the rest in the hands of God and you will always win. Whether the victory be in gaining a trophy or in learning a lesson, the IRISH have what it takes.
